What is domestic/family violence?

In domestic or family violence, one person attempts to control or hurt another through actions or threats that can include physical, sexual, verbal, or psychological abuse. People of all ages, income levels, faiths, sexual orientation, gender, and education levels can experience domestic or family violence.

What is sexual violence?

Sexual violence is the general term used to explain any act of a sexual nature where a person is forced, threatened, or intimidated into engaging in the activity without her or his permission. Some examples of this are rape, forced sodomy, sexual harassment, and indecent exposure.

Domestic and Sexual Violence Services can help if:

- You have been sexually assaulted and don't know what to do.
- A family member or friend is a survivor of sexual assault or domestic violence and you want to know how to help them.
- You were sexually assaulted some time ago and are now having difficulty because of this past trauma.
- You are in a relationship in which you are being physically and/or emotionally abused.
- You have been abusive toward a partner or family member, and you want to stop your abusive behavior.
- You have ended a relationship and are being stalked or harassed.
- You have separated from an abusive partner and need help making the transition.
