Summary

This report presents the results of the January 2002 Fairfax County Rental Housing Complex Census. All data in this report are based on information provided by the participating rental complexes. The census supplies data on number of rental units, vacancy rates and rental costs of all known County rental housing complexes containing five or more units. Public housing complexes and certain senior citizen housing complexes are not included in this report. The report summarizes data for the County as a whole, for each Planning District and Supervisor District, and by age of complex and type of structure, where appropriate. The total inventory of units includes all of the complexes that participate in the census. Calculations of vacancy rates and average rents are based on the information supplied by participating complexes. In 2002 all complexes participated in the survey, representing a 100 percent response rate among all known rental-housing units in Fairfax County.

The 2002 Rental Housing Complex Census reveals a net increase of 1,047 units, which is 1.8 percent more than the inventory of rental housing units in January 2001. A total of 1,048 new units were added to the rental housing inventory due to the addition of three rental complexes to the Census and unit additions to existing rental housing complexes. A net of 103 units were lost when they were taken off the market for renovation or converted to commercial use. One hundred and two units were added through renovation and conversion of nonresidential units to residential units.

Average monthly rental rates are no longer increasing as rapidly as in recent years, reflecting an overall slowdown in the national and regional economy that reduced the entire Washington area's economic growth rate from 5.9 percent in 2000 to an estimated 2.2 percent in 2001.¹ Echoing these trends, the average monthly rent in the County increased only $28 from $1,129 in January 2001 to $1,157 in January 2002. This represents an increase in average monthly rent of only 2.5 percent, compared to the 14.2 percent increase noted in the 2001 Rental Housing Census. Average monthly rents in Fairfax County range from $802 for efficiency units to a high of $1,414 for two-bedroom units with a den, and $1,396 for three-bedroom units with a den. Rent rates reported were fair market rent rates. Special rent rates and promotions for new tenants were not reported for any rental complex. Some rental complexes offer short-term leases for furnished apartments. These units usually rent for a higher rate than do unfurnished long-term lease units. These higher rent rates are included in the rent data computations.

The vacancy rate for all rental complexes participating in the census and providing vacancy data is 5.5 percent. This is an increase of 3.0 percentage points over the January 2001 vacancy rate of 2.5 percent, and returns vacancy rates to pre-1999 levels.

In January 2001 two-thirds of the rental housing complexes had increases in average rent of more than 10 percent. In January 2002 only 13 percent of the rental housing complexes had increases this large. Almost 10 percent reported no change in average rent rates, and over one-fifth reported decreases in average rent.

I. Rental Housing Complex Census Analysis

The 2002 Rental Housing Census, conducted by the Department of Systems Management for Human Services, includes all privately owned rental complexes in Fairfax County with five or more units. This census provides information as of January 2002 on the number of rental units, vacancy rates and rent levels of rental housing units located in the County. Excluded from this census are rental complexes with fewer than five units, rental housing units undergoing renovation and temporarily removed from the market, housing units that are leased to renters by individual owners, public housing, and certain senior citizen complexes. In 2002, 100 percent of Fairfax County's rental housing complexes participated in the Rental Housing Census.

A. Rental Housing Complex Census Inventory

Data from the 2002 Rental Housing Complex Census indicate that the total number of rental apartments and townhomes in Fairfax County increased by a net of 1,047 units to 60,175 units in January 2002 from 59,128 units in January 2001, or 1.8 percent (Table 1). These data indicates that new construction is not increasing as rapidly as in recent years.

The increase in the inventory of rental units included 1,048 new units, 898 fewer new units than were added in the previous survey period. Remaining differences are due to renovation starts or completions and conversion of residential units to or from nonresidential purposes such as storage space, office space, or models.

Note: Figures include participants and nonparticipants in the census for units located in major rental housing complexes having five or more units. Figures do not include units leased by individual owners or public housing complexes and are not available for 1999.

B. Inventory by Planning Districts

Table 2 illustrates net and percent changes in the rental housing inventory by Planning District. Two complexes previously included in the Bull Run Planning District (the Jefferson at Fair Oaks and Summit Fair Oaks) were allocated to the Fairfax Planning District for the 2002 Rental Housing Census to correct data coding errors. This resulted in a shift of 425 total units from the Bull Run to the Fairfax Planning District. January 2001 Planning District data in this report reflect these corrections. Three apartment complexes were added to the Census and five apartment complexes added units. One hundred and two units were added due to conversion of nonresidential units to residential units and renovation completion at the time of the survey, for a net increase of 1,047 units, or 1.8 percent since January 2001.

Net increases in rental housing units in 2002 occurred in the Bull Run (360 new units), Fairfax (337 new units), and Upper Potomac (273 new units) Planning Districts. The construction of Springfield Crossing also added 78 new units to the Springfield Planning District. Chantilly Crossing added 360 low-rise units not included in the 2001 Rental Housing Survey to the Bull Run Planning District. In the Fairfax Planning District, the Reserve at Fairfax Corner added 297 units. The completion of the Preserve at Government Center added 40 new units available for rent on January 1, 2002, in the Fairfax Planning District. One new complex (the Townes at Herndon Center) was completed in the Upper Potomac Planning District, adding 27 new units. In addition, Oakwood Dulles added 67 new units, and Dulles Greene added 179 new units to its inventory. Rental housing inventory in the remaining Planning Districts was virtually unchanged from January 2001 to January 2002, reflecting changes due primarily to renovations and conversions to/from nonresidential units to residential units.

C. Inventory by Supervisor District

The Fairfax County Supervisor District reapportionment plan became effective on June 11, 2001, and is reflected for the first time in the 2002 Rental Housing Census. Reapportionment affected rental housing allocations in the Braddock, Lee, Mount Vernon, Springfield, and Sully Supervisor Districts. It should be noted that changes in 2002 data in these Supervisor Districts reflect differences reported by individual complexes as well as shifts in units between Supervisor Districts (noted in Table 3 as "Boundary Changes").

The Lee Supervisor District increased its supply of available units by 78 units with the renovation of 24 units at Kenton Crossing, although its overall inventory of rental housing units decreased because of reapportionment. The Sully Supervisor District, which previously had 14.6 percent of the County's rental housing, now has 4,202 total units, or almost 7.0 percent of the County's rental housing units. However, the Sully Supervisor District reported the construction of 360 new units in January 2002 (see Table 3) with the addition of Chantilly Crossing to the Rental Housing Census. Again, because of Supervisor District reapportionment in 2001, percent changes from the previous survey period are of limited use in evaluating rental housing unit gains and losses in Districts with changed boundaries.

The Springfield Supervisor District previously had the smallest percent of rental housing in the County (803 units, or 1.4 percent of the County's rental housing units). Following reapportionment, the Springfield District now has a total of 5,434 units (largely from the Sully Supervisor District), or 9.0 percent of the County's rental housing units. The Springfield Supervisor District added 337 new units were added to the since the 2001 Census from the Reserve at Fairfax Corner (297 units) and Preserve at Government Center (40 units).

The addition of 206 new units at Dulles Greene and the Townes at Herndon Center increased the available inventory of housing units to 4.8 percent in the Dranesville Supervisor District (which includes the Town of Herndon). The Braddock Supervisor District added no new units, although its overall inventory increased because of reapportionment. The Hunter Mill Supervisor District, (including the Town of Vienna), added 67 new units at the Oakwood Dulles. Remaining differences again reflect renovations and conversions to/from nonresidential units to residential units.

Figures do not include units leased by individual owners or public housing complexes and are not available for 1999. Small differences may occur due to differences in reporting by rental complexes.

The vacancy rate for Fairfax County rental housing complexes more than doubled, from 2.5 percent in January 2001 to 5.5 percent in January 2002.

II. Vacancy Rates

A. Vacant Units and Vacancy Rate

In January 2002, 60,175 (100 percent) of the participating Fairfax County units provided vacancy data. The estimated vacancy rate for rental complex units providing vacancy data was 5.5 percent at this time (see Table 4). This was an increase of 3.0 percentage points above the January 2001 vacancy rate of 2.5 percent. A total of 3,282 units were reported vacant. Of the 236 complexes surveyed, 70.0 percent of complexes reported overall vacancy rates at or less than the County vacancy rate of 5.5 percent. Although the overall vacancy rate increased by 3.0 percentage points, the percent of complexes with vacancy rates at or below the County's average is the same as the previous survey period. However, more complexes reported high vacancy rates. In January 2002, 13.0 percent of participating complexes (31 total) reported vacancy rates higher than 10.0 percent, compared to only 1.7 percent (or 4 complexes) in January 2001.

Age of Complex

Vacancy rates were significantly higher this year for every age category of rental housing unit except for those in the 6 to 10 year old range. These units also had lower vacancy rates than newer units, and units in the 11 to 15 years range.

Those units 16 years and older had lower vacancy rates than the County's average of 5.5 percent (Table 5). Complexes added to the survey database in January 2002 may be included in the "1 to 5 Years " category if construction began before 2001.

Note: Figures are based on participants in the census for units located in major rental housing complexes having five or more units. When a complex provides a range of rents for a particular unit size, the midpoint of that rent range is used in the average rent calculation.

Planning District

The Bull Run Planning District had the highest vacancy rate, followed by the McLean Planning District (see Table 6). Again, newly available units still being leased in January 2002 at Chantilly Crossing, as well as vacancies in larger complexes like the Bent Tree and Lakeside Apartments, accounted for about 30 percent of the vacancies in the Bull Run Planning District. The Upper Potomac, Lower Potomac, and Fairfax Planning Districts had vacancy rates only slightly higher the County's rate of 5.5 percent. Twenty-five percent of the complexes in the Upper Potomac Planning District had vacancy rates over 10.0 percent. New and as yet unleased units at the Reserve at Fairfax Corner accounted for almost one-fifth of the vacancies in the Fairfax Planning District.

Nine Planning Districts comprising over half of the County's rental housing inventory had vacancy rates below the County's average vacancy rate of 5.5 percent. The Pohick Planning District had one of the lowest vacancy rates (2.2 percent) in the County, but also has less than 2.0 percent of the County's rental housing inventory. The Baileys, Jefferson, and Mount Vernon Planning Districts, which comprise one-third of the County's rental housing inventory, account for only 18.0 percent of the County's vacant units. The remaining units in the Vienna, Rose Hill, Annandale, Lincolnia and Springfield Planning Districts account for almost one-fifth of the County's rental housing inventory, but less than 15 percent of the total vacancies.

Supervisor District

As of January 2002 the Sully Supervisor District, which also had the largest number of new units, had the highest estimated vacancy rate within the County at 14.9 percent (see Table 7). Newly available units still being leased in January 2002 at Chantilly Crossing account for over one-third of the vacancies in the Sully Supervisor District. Eleven of the 14 complexes in the Sully Supervisor District had higher vacancy rates than in January 2001. The Dranesville Supervisor District had the second highest vacancy rate at 8.3 percent. Newly available units at Dulles Green accounted for 17.0 percent of the vacancies in the Dranesville Supervisor District. Hunter Mill and Providence Supervisor District vacancy rates were slightly higher than the County average of 5.5 percent. Vacancy rates were lowest in the Braddock, Mason, and Lee Supervisor Districts. Of these, only the Lee Supervisor District experienced any new growth (78 new units). Vacancy rates in the Mount Vernon and Springfield Supervisor Districts were somewhat lower than the County's (4.0 percent and 5.0 percent, respectively).

B. Vacancy Rates by Unit Type

In January 2002 vacancy rates by bedroom size ranged from 1.1 percent for three-bedroom units with dens to 6.1 percent for efficiency and one-bedroom units with dens (Table 8). The vacancy rate for four bedroom apartments jumped from 1.4 percent in January 2001 to 5.5 percent in January 2002, but this represents an increase of only seven vacant units. There were over twice as many one-, two-, and three-bedroom apartments vacant as in the previous survey period. Two-bedroom units with dens, however, had slightly fewer vacancies, down from a vacancy rate of 3.4 percent to only 3.0 percent in January 2002.

C. Vacancy Rates by Structure Type

Vacancy rates were higher for all structure types in January 2002, although vacancy rates for high-rise structures increased less than for other structure types. In January 2001 low-rise and high-rise complexes had vacancy rates similar to the County's vacancy rate of 2.5 percent, while mid-rise and townhome structure vacancy rates were about 1.0 percent lower. In January 2002 the vacancy rate for low-rise units was slightly higher than the County's average of 5.5 percent. Mid-rise structures, which had a vacancy rate of 1.2 percent in January 2001, had a vacancy rate of 4.1 percent in January 2002 - - lower than the County's average, but again higher than the previous survey period (see Table 9). There were twice as many vacant townhomes in January 2002 than in the previous survey period, although townhomes also had a lower vacancy rate (2.9 percent) than the County's average of 5.5 percent. Mid-rise complexes had somewhat lower vacancy rates (4.1 percent) than the County's average.

III. Cost of Rental Housing

A. Average Monthly Rent

In January 2002, Fairfax County average monthly rent had its smallest dollar increase over a one-year period since 1996. The average monthly rent for all rental housing complexes in the census increased by only $28 from $1,129 in January 2001 to $1,157 in January 2002 (Table 10).

Note: Figures are based on participants in the census for units located in major rental housing complexes having five or more units and are not available for 1999. The average rent calculation excludes complexes that did not report rents by type of unit. When a complex provides a range of rents for a particular unit size, the midpoint of that rent range is used in the average rent calculation.

* The 1998-2000 percent change reflects a two-year difference.

Age of Complex

The average monthly rent of newer apartment complexes decreased from January 2001. In January 2002 the average monthly rent for apartments less than one year old was $1,164, compared to $1,320 for January 2001 - - a 13.4 percent decrease. Average monthly rents also decreased slightly for apartments 1 to 5 years old and 6 to 10 years old. Average monthly rents for apartment complexes older than 10 years increased slightly between 2001 and 2002, although average monthly rent generally declines among those with increasing age (Table 11).

Note: Figures are based on participants in the census for units located in major rental housing complexes having five or more units. When a complex provides a range of rents for a particular unit size, the midpoint of that rent range is used in the average rent calculation.

Planning District

The cost of rental units varies by location of the complex within Fairfax County (see Figure 1). Again, note that two complexes previously included in the Bull Run Planning District (the Jefferson at Fair Oaks and Summit Fair Oaks) were allocated to the Fairfax Planning District for the 2002 Rental Housing Census to correct data coding errors. This resulted in a shift of 425 total units from the Bull Run Planning District to the Fairfax Planning District. Thus, changes in 2001 data in these Planning Districts reflect differences reported by individual complexes as well as a shift in units from the Bull Run to the Fairfax Planning District.

The highest average monthly rent ($1,425) was reported in the McLean Planning District. The Rose Hill Planning District had the second highest average rent at $1,329. Average monthly rents in the Bull Run, Fairfax, Lincolnia, Pohick, Upper Potomac, and Vienna Planning Districts were also higher than the County's average monthly rent of $1,157. Six Planning Districts had average monthly rents below the County average: Annandale, Bailey's, Jefferson, Lower Potomac, Mount Vernon, and Springfield. Average monthly rents in the Lower Potomac and Mount Vernon Planning Districts remain below $1,000. Although still higher than the County's average monthly rent, the Upper Potomac Planning District experienced the only average monthly rent decrease (-2.1 percent). Rents decreased slightly in the Bull Run Planning District, but again, shifts in units to the Fairfax Planning Districts prevent accurate comparisons with 2001 figures as data reflect 2001 calculations.

Supervisor District

Fairfax County Rental Housing Census Reports typically include comparisons with average monthly rents from the previous census period. Again, it should be noted that changes from 2001 data in Supervisor Districts affected by reapportionment reflect differences reported by individual complexes as well as shifts in units between Supervisor Districts. Reapportionment affected rental housing allocations in the Braddock, Lee, Mount Vernon, Springfield, and Sully Supervisor Districts.

For the past two years, the most costly rental units were located in the Providence Supervisor District. This year, the Springfield Supervisor District, which had an enormous increase in its inventory of rental housing following reapportionment, had the highest average monthly rent at $1,303. The Providence Supervisor District's allocation of rental housing remained unchanged following reapportionment, and this district had the second highest average monthly rent at $1,292, 11.7 percent higher than the County's average monthly rent and 3.5 percent higher than 2001. Three other Supervisor Districts also had average monthly rents above the County's average of $1,157. Average monthly rents in the Dranesville Supervisor District, which also had no reapportionment changes, were third highest in the County at $1,232. The Braddock Supervisor District (which increased its rental housing inventory following reapportionment) was $1,187, and average monthly rent in the Hunter Mill Supervisor District (which decreased its rental housing inventory following reapportionment) was $1,177.

The Mount Vernon, Mason, and Lee Supervisor Districts, which had average monthly rents below the countywide average in 2001, were again below the County average. Monthly rent is again least expensive in the Mount Vernon Supervisor District where it averages $1,007. Rental units in the Mason and Lee Supervisor Districts average $1,058 and $1,044 per month, respectively. Additionally, for the first time, the Sully Supervisor District had an average monthly rent ($1,139) below the County average. The Sully Supervisor District decreased its rental housing inventory by almost half due to reapportionment. The 2002 Rental Housing Census marks the first time that average monthly rents in all Supervisor Districts exceed $1,000.

B. Average Rent by Unit Type

Rental housing costs in Fairfax County vary according to the size of the unit, structure type and location. Although rent generally increases with increasing bedroom size, four-bedroom units, on average, are still rented for less than other sized units, because the majority of the County's existing four-bedroom units are located in rental complexes where rent is subsidized (see Table 12). Rents for these four-bedroom units varied little from 2001 to 2002.

As of January 2002, efficiencies were the least costly unit type at an average rent of $802 per month. Two-bedroom units with a den, which had the second lowest vacancy rates, were the most costly at an average rent of $1,414 per month. These units experienced the highest average percentage increase (4.5 percent more than in the previous survey period). Average monthly rents for three-bedroom units with a den, which were the most expensive unit type in 2001, were the only unit type to experience a decrease in average rent between 2001 and 2002 (-1.6 percent). Average monthly rents for two- and three-bedroom units without dens increased 3.2 percent from the previous survey period.

C. Average Rent by Structure Type

Average rents were above $1,000 for each type of structure. Townhomes have the highest average monthly rent at $1,458. Low-rise garden apartments, which had the highest vacancy rates, had the next highest rent at $1,147, followed by high-rise units, with an average rent of $1,132. Average monthly rents for mid-rise units increased almost 3.0 percent, from $1,034 in the previous survey period to $1,065 in January 2002 (Table 13).

In January 2002, 13 percent of participating complexes (31 total) reported vacancy rates higher than ten percent, compared to only 1.7 percent (or 4 complexes) in the previous survey period.

IV. Rental Complexes with Features for Individuals with Disabilities

A. Disability Features

Almost 60 percent (a total of 135) of the rental complexes in Fairfax County reported offering units with at least one feature for individuals with disabilities (see Table 14 and Appendix D). Although the complexes reporting accommodations for persons with disabilities contain a total of 39,326 units, not all of these units have disability features. Some complexes only have a few units modified with disability features while other complexes have these features in all of their units. Units designed with features for individuals with disabilities included the following physical adjustments: elevators with Braille; wheelchair accessible building entrances; wide, wheelchair accessible apartment doorways; low cabinets, sinks, and counter tops; shower or tub grab bars; or other accommodations.

Eleven complexes identified other disability features. Hunters Woods Fellowship House and Burke Lake Gardens have emergency pull cords. The Jefferson at Fair Oaks apartments have low thermostats and light switches. Tysons Towers apartments have roll-in showers for wheelchair accessibility. At Summit Oaks, single-level townhouses are wheelchair accessible. Fairfield Crossing offers doorbell signalers for individuals with hearing impairments.

B. Features for Senior, Handicapped, and Low-Income Individuals

Of the 60,175 units in the County's rental housing inventory, 1,661 (or 2.8 percent of total units) were reported as reserved for senior citizens. Eleven percent (6,732 units) were reported as wheelchair accessible. Over one-third of the County's 236 rental housing complexes reported that they accepted Section Eight housing choice vouchers. Every complex with units reserved for senior citizens has at least one disability modification. In addition, the Hunter's Woods Fellowship House reports reserving units either for individuals with limited income who are over 62 or who are handicapped or disabled.

Rental complexes from all age categories offer units modified for individuals with disabilities (see Table 15). Forty percent of the 135 rental housing complexes that offer features for individuals with disabilities were among the oldest in the County - over 20 years of age. Twenty-two percent of the complexes with disability features were in the one to five year age category and 20.0 percent were between 11 to 15 years old. Twelve rental complexes with disability features were 16 to 20 years old, nine were in the 6 to 10 year category, and both of the rental complexes built in the last year have disability modifications.

Planning District

The Upper Potomac Planning District has the largest number of rental housing complexes (29 total) reporting features for individuals with disabilities (see Table 16). Eleven percent of these units are wheelchair accessible, almost 5.0 percent are reserved for senior citizens, and one-third accept Section Eight vouchers. The Bull Run Planning District has the second largest number of complexes that offer features for individuals with disabilities, with 21 rental complexes and 6,536 total units. Fifty-five percent of the units in the Mount Vernon Supervisor District that offer features for individuals with disabilities report having wheelchair accessible units, and two-thirds accept Section Eight vouchers.

Supervisor District

The Hunter Mill Supervisor District has the largest number of rental complexes (28 total) that offer features for individuals with disabilities (see Table 17). Nine percent of these units are wheelchair accessible, and almost 40 percent accept Section Eight vouchers. Over half of the units in the Mount Vernon Supervisor District that offer features for individuals with disabilities report having wheelchair accessible units. Over 3.0 percent of these units were reported as being reserved for senior citizens, and half accept Section Eight vouchers.

C. Units Reserved for Senior Citizens

The ten complexes with units reserved only for senior citizens offer various options. All ten of these complexes provide grab bars in the shower/tub and seven of them also offer elevators with Braille and wide doorways that are wheelchair accessible (see Table 18).

A total of 1,661 units are reserved for senior citizens (see Table 19). Of the ten complexes that reserve housing for seniors, six are low-rise garden structures, and four are mid- or high-rise structures. All but two offer some wheelchair accessible apartment units. Seven accept section eight vouchers. Although the ages of complexes vary, seven of the ten were built more than 15 years ago.
