

What is the ActiveFairfax Transportation Plan?

Fairfax County is updating and combining the current Bicycle Master Plan and the Countywide Trails Plan into one—the ActiveFairfax Transportation Plan. Active transportation means self-propelled, mostly human-powered travel including walking, biking, rolling (scooter, wheelchair, stroller), hiking, running, and riding for transportation and recreational purposes. The plan will establish a vision and a roadmap for implementation of safe, convenient, and enjoyable streets and trails in Fairfax County.

Through collaboration with partners across the County and the region, the ActiveFairfax Transportation Plan development effort will:

- Provide an opportunity for community input through a variety of engagement tools and activities that aim to ensure all County residents' mobility needs and desires are understood and considered;
- Develop a vision to help shape the future of active transportation in Fairfax County;
- Consolidate previous active transportation planning efforts into one cohesive plan that is easy to digest and track for performance;
- Encourage livable street design to ensure the Fairfax County transportation network connects people to where they live, work, play, learn and take transit; and
- Provide clear direction to improve safety for those most vulnerable in the community.

YOUR VOICE MATTERS!

Public input is critical to the success of this planning effort. There are several fun ways to engage and make your voice be heard:

- Take the survey: Help us understand how you currently travel and your ideas on the future of active transportation in Fairfax County.
- Map your ideas: Add information into two interactive maps on walking and biking destinations, barriers to active travel, and missing links in the active transportation network.
- Stay connected: A series of community meetings and outreach opportunities will be scheduled, so be sure to check the project website at www.fairfaxcounty.gov/transportation/bike-walk/activefairfax for more information and project updates. You can also send the Active Transportation Team an email at activefairfax@fairfaxcounty.gov or call them at 877-5600, TTY 711, to share your ideas or to ask questions.
