County Adopts New Zoning Rules for Signs

The Board of Supervisors on March 19, 2019 adopted a significant rewrite to its zoning for signs to put in place content-neutral language.

Electronic Display Sign Rules:

For the first time, the zoning rules explicitly regulate freestanding, electronic display signs. Their display screen is limited to 50 percent of the total size of the overall sign. The regulations also dictate that the copy on these signs may not change more than once every eight seconds, and the change must be instantaneous without rolling, fading, flashing, varying in brightness, or giving the illusion of movement. Digital signs also cannot have white, off-white, or yellow backgrounds only, and the display boards must include a photo cell to automatically dim them after sunset.

Yard Signs Added as a New Category:

On residential properties, there are no restrictions on the number of yard signs allowed or how long they may be displayed; however, homeowners are limited to posting a maximum of 12 square feet of total yard signage, with no single sign exceeding 4 square feet in area and a height of 4 feet.

Signs on Non-Residential Properties:

For non-residential properties, the new regulations also allow minor signs for business and non-profits. These regulations differ depending on the type of road on which the property is located. For properties on a major thoroughfare up to 32 square feet of minor signage can be displayed on each lot. For all other properties, up to 24 square feet can be displayed. Like yard signs, there are no restrictions on the display time, but there is a limit on the number of freestanding signs, only two per lot with a height of 4 feet.

The new ordinance also puts in place limits for what are called "off-premises" commercial signs, like signs pointing the way to open houses. Such signs can only be posted from noon on Friday through noon on Monday and are restricted to the same rules as yard signs.

Prohibited Signs:

The new ordinance also identifies several prohibited sign types, most of which were carried over from the old regulations:

- Moving or windblown signs, such as feather signs or inflatable signs.
- Signs that have flashing or intermittent lights that do not conform to the regulations for electronic display signs.
- Roof signs.
- Any sign that obstructs visibility at a corner or intersection.

For more information or questions about the new zoning rules for signs, contact the Department of Planning and Zoning's Zoning Administration Division at 703-324-1314, TTY 711 or email dpzzmodcomments@fairfaxcounty.gov.

New Loan Program Will Help Businesses Make Energy Efficiency Improvements

Commercial, industrial, nonprofit, and multi-family property owners looking to make their buildings more energy efficient will now be able to get help from Fairfax County.

The county will bear no costs for the program. Under state law, the county was required to pass an ordinance to establish the Commercial Property Assessed Clean Energy program (C-PACE). The program will be administered by a private company that the county will select through a competitive bid.

How it Works:

Eligible property owners will be able to take out private loans for energy efficiency, renewable energy, water-saving, stormwater, and climate resiliency or other projects as determined by the program's administrator. These projects could be undertaken on existing buildings or when constructing new ones.

While the county neither lends the money nor guarantees its repayment, it will place a lien on properties that take out C-PACE loans. The loans are repaid directly to the lender. This enables private lenders who assume the financial risks to offer loans that are more attractive than traditional commercial bank loans.

Benefits:

C-PACE loans help property owners because they are not required to make any down payments or put cash up front. For the county, C-PACE will enhance the overall property tax values and support employment and economic growth. Most importantly, it advances the county's commitment to cut greenhouse gas emissions, encouraging investment in energy efficiency.

After the county selects a C-PACE program administrator, detailed information about eligible properties and projects will be available. For more information, contact the Fairfax County environmental and energy coordinator at 703-324-1788, TTY 711.
